

1. The second series of BBC1's the Traitors has a big following. It's only a game show but winning depends upon dishonesty. Does a programme like this simply entertain and is not to be taken seriously or does it support the view that lying is OK if you can get away with it? There's a lot of money at stake.
2. ITV's screening of 'Mr Blake and The Post Office' has exposed the cruelty lying and injustice perpetrated against Post Office Staff. Does this inflame our sense of fairness and right. Does it make you more definite to stand up always against injustice, to oppose companies and organisations that use their muscle unfairly? How do you feel about increasing reliance on machines and technology?
3. We're all very concerned about the state of the world. There's a dearth of real leadership, an increase in partisan politics and abuses of power. It's easy to bemoan how things are and hard to know what if anything we can do. How does hope express itself in positive personal action? Does discussion and planning with friends lead to better attitudes and support?
4. Did your prayer change at all last year? Should it have done? Did you read more or use the Scriptures more last year? Again, should you have done?
5. What do you want personally from this year? What can you make happen? Do you have plans?
6. What is your passion? What delights you? Final answer, or is there more you want to add?
7. Is there an initiative you'd like to see in the parish? Can you help to make it happen?

Thank you.
